Custodial history

William Harold Hutt was an English economist and Nobel Prize winner. The personal and professional papers of William Harold Hutt contains publications, correspondence, pamphlets, other print material, and newspaper clippings. The material in the collection provides knowledge of Hutt's contribution to academia and internationally in the field of economics from when he obtained his Bachelor of Commerce degree at the London School of Economics (LSE), until his death in 1988. The collection includes material relating to laissez-faire economic theory, and to economic conditions and race relations in South Africa. The collection also includes material collected by his wife Grethe Hutt-Schonken who was an artist, whose paintings were based mainly on ethnic cultures of Black Africa. Content belonging to Grethe in this collection includes diaries, photographs, postcards, collection of degree certificates, and newspaper clippings.

Scope and content

---

The material in this collection provides a history of Professor William Harold Hutt's academic career as an economist. The collection also includes personal material, newspaper clippings, letters of correspondence, and some of his popular publications. The collection highlights Hutt's contribution to the field of economics, the work he did towards improving unemployment in countries, and the work he did with trade unions. Hutt also worked to improve the situation created by apartheid white labour unions causing great hinderances to black people trying to enter the workforce.

The collection also includes material collected by his wife Grethe Hutt-Schonken who was an art lover and collector. She travelled to the interior of Africa and studied African folklore and art and her paintings are based mainly on ethnic cultures of Black Africa. Content belonging to Grethe in this collection includes diaries, photographs, postcards, collection of degree certificates, and newspaper clippings.
